ANONYMOUS EVIDENCE SECURANCE

AFTER A
SEXUAL OFFENSE

IMPORTANT FACTS

The injuries and traces of the assault or abuse are legally documented as part of a medical examination and secured using a forensics set.

During the examination, possible consequences of the assault – such as infection with HIV or other sexually transmitted diseases as well as worries about an unwanted pregnancy and the use of a subsequent contraceptive – can be discussed. This examination is anonymous, confidential, voluntary and free of charge.

Those affected by the sexual assault are also informed about psychosocial assistance.

A police report can be filed later.

DECISIVE STEPS

Immediately after the act of violence, the affected should go to the hospital named on the back and ask for an Anonymous Evidence Securance (ASS) if they do not want to file a police report at first.

To secure the traces after the assault, it is important not to change clothes and, if possible, not to take a shower.

The traces are kept in the Institute for forensic medicine in Düsseldorf for 10 years and can be retrieved in the event of a later complaint.

After the investigation, those affected receive information and contact details from counselling centers and victim protection facilities.

COMPLAINT YES OR NO?

Most of those affected are very stressed after the sexual offense and need time to understand what happened. The decision for or against filing charges should therefore be carefully considered. Professional advice, for example from the women's advice center, can help to make the right decision.

Filing charges is voluntary. Once known to the law enforcement authorities, it must be followed up and cannot be withdrawn.

It is possible to seek legal advice before filing charges. In any case, the Anonymous Evidence Securance (ASS) ensures that the traces can be used as evidence in any later criminal proceedings.
